PORTLAND MARKETS

Latest Quotations in the Portland Produce Markets.

Complete Market Reports Corrected Each Day Giving the Wholesale Prices of Commodities, Farm Produce and Vegetables.

Portland, Aug. 18.—Oregon apples have improved very much in quality as a result of the visits of the "bug man," who has been condemning wormy fruit found exposed for sale. Apples are consequently higher in price this year in Portland, but there is little danger of buying infected fruit.

Local fancy creamery butter keeps up in price, although the market is flooded with fancy creamery butter from other states. The latter is sold at 2 1/2 cents a pound less than the product of Oregon creameries, or it would be of low sale. Fresh meats, with the exception of small veal and small mutton, do not sell well. Beef is in little demand, and commission men who handle carcasses of fresh pork, mutton and beef advise producers to withhold shipments until better conditions prevail in the markets. Peaches continue scarce, and prices are such as to preclude their use in canning. They are expected to be more abundant next week, when the crop adjacent to Ashland and The Dalles will be ripe. Peaches are rather late this year in Oregon than usual.
